To guard his head Hazel raised his left arm and received the full force of the blow upon it, which at once fell helpless by his side. He then closed with his antagonist, grasping him by the throat. A second blow on the head, however brought him to the ground, but he still retained his hold on the other's throat, who then called to his mate for a knife " to finish the officer with." MR. STANLEY'S DISCOVERIDE. Who shall say, asks The Times, that the world is not young, or that this is not an age of discovery? Mr. H. M. Stanley, who has just been received with due honour at the Cape has laid open to be snother new world, with infinite possibilities, promises, and splendours. The grand result is numietakeable, and deserves all the honour that can be rendered to it. We now know that on the West of Africa there is waterway more vast, it would seem, than even that of the Nile, and occupying countries for more fertile and productive than even Egypt. It is the human savagery, and that alone, which disfigures these fine veglons. Mr. Stanley, though an American, is good enough to hold out ic this country a boundless prospect of conquest and colonisation in Central Africa. There is a broad river, he tells us, with one of the finest and most capacious mouths in the world, where little of battle ships and commercial steamers might float at all seasons, with a depth of 1,300 feet, and a volume of two millions and a half cubic feet of water the wonderful spectacle, "that you will not take advantage of all this?" It is to be hered we kind is destined to be the home of some wonder- tributed among all Contributors of Rusiness in ful commercial and, perhaps, social development. proportion to the premium paid by them. For practical purposes the human race has still the world before it; and these new regions, not only in Africa; but in Canada, offer opportunities which captivate the mind. There is infinite encouragement to the gradual colonisation of such regions. But we apprehend that for a long while Mr. Stanley and Commander Cameron will hold the chief possession, and that an honorary one, in these new realms. Many boxes of letters are received at the Post Office not sealed that is to say, the box is fastened with sealing wax, but there is no impression of a seal. The attention of boxholders is called to the necessity of carefully sealing such boxes with some recognisable seal, and of sending a chitbook or receipt with them. The omission of the latter precaution leaves a doubt as to whother the contents of the box ever reached the Post Office; the omission of the former, as to whether part of them might not have been abstracted for the sake of the Postage Stamps. Though a well-made man and rather gross than thin, we learn from Caulfield's "Memoirs" that he exhibited in a most natural manner almost every species of deformity and dislocation. He frequently made himself merry with the tailors, often sending for one of them to take his measure, but so contriving as to have an immoderate rising on one of his shoulders. When his clothes were brought home and tried upon him, the deformity was removed begged pardon for the mistake, and mended it as fast as he could. But upon a third. trial he was found with perfectly straight shoulders and a hump on his back.
